SHARE SPECULATION DULLER AND DULLER ON NEW YORK 'CHANGE.

Sterling Exchange Market Easy and Movement of Prices Narrow-Local Markets Holding Steady.

At New York yesterday money on call was easy at 1 per cent.; last loan, 1; closed

1 per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 34644 per cent. Sterling exchange was easier with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.90%@4.90% for demand and at $4.8914@4.8912 for sixty bills, $4.88\4@4.88\4. Silver certificates, 66% 667%c; bar silver, 55%c; Mexican dollars, 53%c.

Total sales of stocks were 130,382 shares, including: American Sugar, 16,000; American Tobacco, 25,900; Atchison, 3,600; Burlington, 10,700; Distillers', 14,500; Reading, 3,600; Rock Island, 3,900; St. Paul, 4,600; Southern Railroad preferred, 3,400; Tennessee Coal and Iron, 4,700; Union Pacific, 3,100; U. S. Leather preferred, 3,400.

The share speculation yesterday was without important feature. The tone of the market was better than Wednesday, but the trading was dull. The frost scare having subsided, there was some covering in the grangers, and the fact that no further engagements of gold for shipment to Europe were announced, helped to strengthen the general market. The easier tone of the sterling exchange market was also a favorable influence. The movement of prices was very narrow, not exceeding fractional limits except in a few instances. New England was a notable exception to this rule, selling up 7 per cent. to 651/2 and closing at the highest point touched. This heavy advance was made on purchase of 1,500 shares for covering short contracts of certain minority stockholders who had held out against the clique of insiders and were subjected to a eze. Tobacco was weak on the execution of selling orders from the West and South, induced by the reported progress of the opposition to the trust. After an irregular opening prices declined under the leadership of Tobacco, but quickly steadied and before midday had recorded a general advance, in which Sugar, New England, Tobacco, Minneapolis & St. Louis first 14c; cinchonida 12615c; carbolic poid 32 referred were most prominent. After mid-lay Tobacco was again raided and the other hares also reacted, the chief losses being in Lake Erie & Western preserved and Man-hattan. Late in the day speculation became firmer and small advances were made, gen-strate while Land common and preferred erally while Lead common and preferred rose 1 per cent. on the declaration of the regular dividend on the preferred stock. regular dividend on the preferred stock.

Tennessee Coal was pressed for sale during the greater part of the day and lost 1½ over cent. In the final trading New Jersey Central broke 1 per cent., but rallied half. The market closed firm and generally higher, the only gain on last night's figures over a fraction being 1½ in Oregon Short-line, due to buying on the heavy in-Short-line, due to buying on the heavy in-crease in June earnings. Lake Erie & West-ern preferred is down 1% and Tobacco 1%, and there are a few other fractional losses. ds were frregular, with sales of $1.

GAME IN SOUTH AFRICA. The Best Hunting in the World Still

Found There. Perhaps the most interesting feature of a new South African guidebook is the ac-South Africa is said to have at one time been the richest region for big game in the world. There has been a vast change since, though the hunting is still probably the best to be found in any civilized part of the globe. The true quagga has been exterminated, while the black wildebeest and the bontebok are preserved to Cape Colony only through the efforts of individ-ual farmers. In the west, in the Kalahari desert, and the lowlands of the east coast, the sable antelope, the roan antelope, the gemsbok, the eland, the wildebeest and the in the valley of the Zambesi.

giraffe are still found. The antelope, the zebra, the Cape buffalo, the lion, the rhinoceros, the leopard, the hyena, and, at times of migration, the elephant, are found The most accesible hunting grounds are in the east and northeast of the Transvaal republic, the Portuguese territory along the Pungwe river, the country north and north-west of Fort Sallsbury and the Kalahari desert. These regions are all far from any points of the coast and from towns and cities known by name on this side of the world. The first of these districts is famous for antelope, the second teems with great quantities of all sorts of game, the third has plenty of sable and roan antelope, and the Kalahari desert is described as the natural and permanent home of big game. It has been suggested that the region be made a game preserve for the public. The hunter is advised to carry flannel shirts, moleskin jackets and breeches, or hooting suits of gabardine, thick stockings, leather gaiters, a soft felt hat, two Kharkee shirts, a heavy overcoat, two pairs of wellnailed shooting boots, two pairs of half-Wellingtons, warm, strong gloves, a waterproof ground sheet to sleep on and four blankets. All these things and whatever else may be needed may be bought at Kim-berly, Pretorla, or Mafeking. Loosely made the back from the sun morning and evening is needed. The South American poncho is excellent for bad weather. The Boers use the military pattern of the Martini-Henry rifle for all game but elephants, and ammunition for this weapon is usually to be found where anything is sold. The nollow bullet is a bad thing to carry if the unter is looking for dangerous game, and all guns must be especially strong in the stock. The hunters drive into the game country with a tent wagon and a team of from sixteen to eighteen oxen. A water cart is a good thing to take along, especialy in the Kalahari desert. Each white man of the party must have a horse. If the salted horses, that is, those that have had the horse sickness, should be taken, as others are sure to catch the disease. Two men may have a South African hunting trip of six months for about $2,500, ex-clusive of ship and rail expenses. The lion is extinct south of the Orange iver, but is found in the north of the Transvaal. The natives say there are three sorts of lions in South Africa-the white, the red, and the gray necked-the last being the most savage. But naturalists do not make these distinctions. The full-grown lion is about twelve feet from the tip of the nose to the end of the tail, and weighs from four to five hundred pounds. He should be shot between the eyes or close to the roof of the tail. It is said that the shoulder shot, even though it pierce the heart, does not always prevent the fatal spring. A shot that breaks the shoulder is disabling. The leopard is usually called the tiger in South Africa. Both he and the cheetah, often confused, with the leopard, are fine game for the hunter, but the cheetan, being easily killed, is almost extinct save in central Africa. The elephant is practically extinct for the purposes of the hunter of the Zambesi, save on the east coast along the Pungwe river. It is strictly protected in the Transvaal and further south. Mining operations have driven the elephants from the Knysa region, as the creatures particularly detest the noise of blasting, as indeed any other loud or sharp sound. When they occasionally trespass on south African roads they can be driven off by the crack of a whip. The south African elephant can seldom be killed by the forehead shot, for he lacks the soft spot there that makes that the fatal shot for the

The white rhinoceros, recently thought to be extinct, is still found occasionally in Mashonaland, Zuluiand, and the Zambesi valley. Several were shot in those parts last year. The black rhinoceros has the same habitat as the elephant, but is ex-tremely hard to find. The hippopotamus is still found near the mouth of the Orange river in Cape Colony, in the coast streams of Zululand, and plentifully in the streams of Portuguese South Africa, in the remoter parts of Mashonaland, in the upper waters of the Zambesi, and in Lake 'Ngami. The fatal shots are beneath the in the north of the Transvaal, though rarely, and in Matabeleland. They are found in great numbers in the dryest and most remote parts of the Kalahari desert, where,

AN EARLY DECLINE IN WHEAT RE-COVERED LATER IN THE DAY.

Cash Buying Sent Wheat, Corn and

CHICAGO, Aug. 15 .- After an early decline to-day wheat reacted on cash buying and closed %c higher for September. September corn closed %c higher; September oats %c higher and provisions made good advances.

The first thing to strike the wheat traders was the absence of a freezing temperature. The possibility of frost in the Northwest last night had buoyed up the expectation of the bulls and disappointment found immediate expression at the opening. September wheat, which closed yesterday with buyers at 66c, was not wanted at over 65%c, with numerous sellers at the same time at 65%c. Before it reacted it had declined in the first place to 65%c. Inside of the next hour it recovered to 66%c, and for some time thereafter it kept within the range of 661%c and 65%c. The demand at Chicago for wheat to go to interior mills and to the seaboard for export was also in evidence, but the short sellers continued to fill up the bull speculators with grain. The local sentiment was inclined to be bearish on the mildness of the export business and the probability of a heavy movement of the new spring wheat very soon, and there was free selling tor a time. As the market got little or no support the price gradually worked off. While the market was weak and tendency downward a sensational re-port was sprung that a cold wave was approaching with a promise of unusual severity, and the sentiment quickly changed. Shorts took fright and began to cover, and in a short time the price was advanced %c. or from 65%c to 66%c. Later advices discredited the weather sensation story and a reaction of %c followed. But reports of some revival of cash buying partially restored confidence and the market had a good rally, going up ic from the low point. The market was nervously strong during the last hour and closed at

The reports concerning the growth of the plant were not so uniformly favorable as before and shorts were more willing to take profits. The demand was still maintained for cash corn.

Oats were firm, helped largely by the strength in wheat and corn. September opened unchanged at 19½c, touched 19%c and advanced to 20½c, where it closed.

The provision trade was influenced to some extent by the better feeling in corn and wheat, but it was not supposed that much of the buying which caused the advance in prices was for long account. Pork left off with a gain of 25c. Lard at the close was .10c and ribs .12½c higher.

Phrenological Characteristics of Men

Chicago Chronicle. We cannot have a perfect face without a perfect head. The reason the Romans had the convex form of nose was because the middle lobe of the brain was predominant, being that in which the selfish, warlike faculties are located. The Greeks were more literary and artistic and hence did not develop the same form of noce. The American Indian had a broad head, a convex nose, and, therefore, is more warlike than the more narrow-headed negro with a concave nose.

If the cerebellum or little brain is relatively stronger than the cerebrum, there will be a relatively larger development of the chin than any other part of the face. This can be very clearly shown by drawing a perpendicular line and ascertaining what a perpendicular line and ascertaining what part of the face projects furthest forward or most decidedly over this line.

If the chin is the most prominent feature of the face there will be a tendency to obstinacy, brutality, and especially to sensuality. You will find that if the chin is thick there will be a large development of the cerebellum in the lower back head, which is the control of the cerebellum in the lower back head, which is the seat of amativeness. Parents and reformers should note this, and be governed accordingly. There is always danger of a young lady marrying too early with this kind of a chin. Such girls are often fascinated by designing men, and run away from home and marry, and are apt to find they have made a fatal mistake. Girls with small chins will be modest, and many of them become spinsters. All prolific people have large chins. The Germans will never become extinct. When the lips are the most prominent the appetites are in danger of ruling. Parents whose boys have large lips should give them the best discipline and advice, or they may become intemperate. The colored people have been blamed for their theft. If it is true, it is because of their strong appetites. If at all, they usually steal something to eat. It is the Yan-kee who steals money. The Germans have full lips in correspondence with their love of good living. John Bull has large lips, and hence carves scientifically and takes time to eat, while Brother Jonathan, with maller lips, cuts and eats in a hurry. John travels with his pocket full of bread, cheese and beer. Jonathan with his pocket full of newspapers. John lives as he goes along, Jonathan goes along while he lives. The Germans and English are very broadheaded. Notice how full and round they are in and about the ears.
